Whether you already have a job and want to find another one or you're unemployed looking for work, your career search is an important one. Where do you start? Follow these tips and tricks to help you find your dream job.Formulate Your Brand and SkillsDetermine what your personal brand is — that's how you want employers to perceive you in the workplace. Look at the skills you have and your former job performance to highlight your best qualities. Once you find five or more outstanding traits, you can begin to develop your brand. You might want to position yourself as a leader or someone who's logical. This sets the tone for the rest of the career search. Be sure to weave your branding into any social media platforms that you use.Resume and Cover LetterWrite your resume and cover letter. Save the documents on your computer to adjust wording later based on actual jobs you apply to — they should be personalized for each company and position. Software programs and website templates can guide you through writing the resume and cover letter. Check and double check for spelling and grammatical errors. Consider enlisting the help of a trusted friend to critique your work. If you prefer, you can hire a resume service to evaluate your work and provide pointers.Secure ReferencesEmployers often ask for work-related references. Choose the people you think will give you the best recommendations. Contact each of them to make sure they're willing to be references. This benefits you in two ways. You can secure valuable references, and it also lets them know you're job searching. They might have some leads for you. Sometimes word-of-mouth is what lands you a job.Master the InterviewPractice interviewing with someone who can help you. Review sample interview questions that you might anticipate for your specific position. A successful interview is a two-way conversation. Come up with a few of your own questions to ask the potential employer, too. This shows interest in the job and the company. Once you actually have a real interview scheduled, research the company to be certain your questions are pertinent.Research and ApplyResearch newspaper employment ads and online job search websites. Employment agencies can also help you with finding available jobs. Apply for jobs that look appealing even if they don't meet every qualification you're looking for. Complete online or in-person applications and fill out any required employment hiring forms. Attach your resume and cover letter, and wait for a response. You might not hear from the employer right away. If an interviewer provides a period of time that you might need to wait before hearing back from the company, wait until after that period to follow up with the hiring department if they still haven't contacted you. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET If you're good with your hands and basic tools, then you may be a good fit for the construction industry with some training. There is a broad range of jobs in the field from building homes to commercial construction. Using things guidelines, you can learn how to find construction jobs.Search Through Online Job SitesWhen you search through online job sites, you'll find a wide variety of construction job postings. Start by creating your resume on these websites. In doing so, your resume will be matched up with job postings for which you're qualified as well as those that are in your area. These jobs are regularly updating, so it's critical that you're keeping your resume up-to-date and checking the sites often.Classified WebsitesEmployers are consistently looking for ways to not only reach as many prospective employees as possible but do so in a way that will save them money. So, you'll find them using websites that will allow them to use free postings for jobs like Craigslist, for example. You can narrow your search by location like for job postings in Miami. Even though you can't post your resume on classified websites, you can make direct contact with the employer with your information.Blogs or Company WebsitesMany companies will post their job listings on their websites in a "Careers" tab or link. You'll also find this information in a blog post if they choose to make updates in that way. When companies make these postings, they'll be specific regarding the location like, "job postings Chicago," or "job postings Los Angeles," for example. They'll post specific titles, like driver job postings, for example, as well as qualifications and the job requirements.Search Temporary AgenciesIt isn't uncommon to find construction job listings at a temporary agency. While you may be looking for something full-time, this is an excellent opportunity for you to get your foot in the door with the company. Initially, they may be looking for someone temporary to fill a part-time or specific need. However, that doesn't mean the position won't open up to something full-time in the future.Don't Forget Your NewspaperYour local newspaper is an excellent resource for finding construction jobs in your area. In addition to finding construction jobs with companies, you'll also find opportunities for individuals who are seeking contractors to work on smaller projects. For example, if someone needs a new deck or would like a shed built, they may place an ad in the classifieds. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET
